The Handbook of Internet Studies

Handbooks in Communication and Media

This series aims to provide theoretically ambitious but accessible volumes devoted to the major fields and subfields within communication and media studies. Each volume sets out to ground and orientate the student through a broad range of specially commissioned chapters, while also providing the more experienced scholar and teacher with a convenient and comprehensive overview of the latest trends and critical directions.

The Handbook of Children, Media, and Development, edited by Sandra L. Calvert and Barbara J. Wilson
The Handbook of Crisis Communication, edited by W. Timothy Coombs and Sherry J. Holladay
The Handbook of Internet Studies, edited by Mia Consalvo and Charles Ess
The Handbook of Rhetoric and Public Address, edited by Shawn J. Parry-Giles and J. Michael Hogan
The Handbook of Critical Intercultural Communication, edited by Thomas K. Nakayama and Rona Tamiko Halualani
The Handbook of Global Communication and Media Ethics, edited by Robert S. Fortner and P. Mark Fackler

Forthcoming
The Handbook of Global Research Methods, edited by Ingrid Volkmer
The Handbook of International Advertising Research, edited by Hong Cheng
The Handbook of Communication and Corporate Social Responsibility, edited by Oyvind Ihlen, Jennifer Bartlett and Steve May
The Handbook of Gender and Sexualities in the Media, edited by Karen Ross
The Handbook of Global Health Communication and Development, edited by Rafael Obregon and Silvio Waisbord
The Handbook of Global Online Journalism, edited by Eugenia Siapera and Andreas Veglis

The Handbook of Internet Studies

Edited by

Mia Consalvo and Charles Ess

WILEY-BLACKWELL

A John Wiley & Sons, Ltd., Publication

This edition first published 2011
© 2011 Blackwell Publishing Ltd

Blackwell Publishing was acquired by John Wiley & Sons in February 2007. Blackwell's publishing program has been merged with Wiley's global Scientific, Technical, and Medical business to form Wiley-Blackwell.

Registered Office
John Wiley & Sons Ltd, The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, United Kingdom

Editorial Offices
350 Main Street, Malden, MA 02148-5020, USA
9600 Garsington Road, Oxford, OX4 2DQ, UK
The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, UK

For details of our global editorial offices, for customer services, and for information about how to apply for permission to reuse the copyright material in this book please see our website at www.wiley.com/wiley-blackwell.

The right of Mia Consalvo and Charles Ess to be identified as the authors of the editorial material in this work has been asserted in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, except as permitted by the UK Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, without the prior permission of the publisher.

Wiley also publishes its books in a variety of electronic formats. Some content that appears in print may not be available in electronic books.

Designations used by companies to distinguish their products are often claimed as trademarks. All brand names and product names used in this book are trade names, service marks, trademarks or registered trademarks of their respective owners. The publisher is not associated with any product or vendor mentioned in this book. This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold on the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering professional services. If professional advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

The handbook of internet studies / edited by Mia Consalvo and Charles Ess.
p. cm. — (Handbooks in communication and media)
Includes bibliographical references and index.
ISBN 978-1-4051-8588-2 (hardcover : alk. paper)
1. Internet—Social aspects. I. Consalvo, Mia, 1969– II. Ess, Charles, 1951–

HM1017.H36 2010
303.48′34—dc22

2009032170

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

Set in 10/13pt Galliard by Graphicraft Limited, Hong Kong
Printed in Singapore

01 2011

Contents

Notes on Editors and Contributors vii
Acknowledgments xii

Introduction: What is "Internet Studies"? 1
Charles Ess and Mia Consalvo

Part I Beyond the Great Divides? A Primer on Internet Histories, Methods, and Ethics 9

Introduction to Part I 11
Charles Ess

1 Studying the Internet Through the Ages 17
Barry Wellman
2 Web Archiving – Between Past, Present, and Future 24
Niels Brügger
3 New Media, Old Methods – Internet Methodologies and the Online/Offline Divide 43
Klaus Bruhn Jensen
4 The Internet in Everyday Life: Exploring the Tenets and Contributions of Diverse Approaches 59
Maria Bakardjieva
5 Internet Research Ethics: Past, Present, and Future 83
Elizabeth A. Buchanan

Part II Shaping Daily Life: The Internet and Society 109

Introduction to Part II 111
Mia Consalvo

6 Assessing the Internet's Impact on Language 117
Naomi S. Baron

7 Internet Policy 137
Sandra Braman
8 Political Discussion Online 168
Jennifer Stromer-Galley and Alexis Wichowski
9 Does the Internet Empower? A Look at the Internet and International Development 188
Deborah L. Wheeler
10 Internet and Health Communication 212
Lorna Heaton
11 Internet and Religion 232
Heidi Campbell
12 Indigenous Peoples on the Internet 251
Laurel Dyson
13 Queering Internet Studies: Intersections of Gender and Sexuality 270
Janne Bromseth and Jenny Sundén

Part III Internet and Culture 301

Introduction to Part III 303
Mia Consalvo

14 Community and the Internet 309
Lori Kendall
15 MOOs to MMOs: The Internet and Virtual Worlds 326
Mia Consalvo
16 Internet, Children, and Youth 348
Sonia Livingstone
17 Internet and Games 369
T. L. Taylor
18 Social Networks 2.0 384
Nancy K. Baym
19 Newly Mediated Media: Understanding the Changing Internet Landscape of the Media Industries 406
P. David Marshall
20 Online Pornography: Ubiquitous and Effaced 424
Susanna Paasonen
21 Music and the Internet 440
Steve Jones
22 Why and How Online Sociability Became Part and Parcel of Teenage Life 452
Marika Lüders

Index 470

Notes on Editors and Contributors

Mia Consalvo is Associate Professor in the School of Media Arts and Studies at Ohio University. She is the author of Cheating: Gaining Advantage in Videogames (MIT Press, 2007) and was executive editor of the Research Annual series, produced by the Association of Internet Researchers. Her research focuses on the hybrid character of the global games industry, as well as gender and sexuality as related to digital gameplay.

Charles Ess is Professor of Philosophy and Religion and Distinguished Professor of Interdisciplinary Studies at Drury University (Springfield, Missouri). He is Professor with special responsibilities in the Information and Media Studies Department, Aarhus University (Denmark, 2009–2012). He has published extensively in computer-mediated communication and cross-cultural approaches to information and computing ethics.

Maria Bakardjieva is Professor at the Faculty of Communication and Culture, University of Calgary, Canada. She is the author of Internet Society: The Internet in Everyday Life (Sage, 2005) and co-editor of How Canadians Communicate (University of Calgary Press, 2004, 2007). Her research examines Internet use practices across different social and cultural contexts, focusing on the ways users appropriate new media communication possibilities in their daily projects.

Naomi S. Baron is Professor of Linguistics at American University in Washington, DC. A specialist in electronically mediated communication, she is the author of Alphabet to Email (Routledge, 2000) and Always On: Language in an Online and Mobile World (Oxford, 2008). Her current research is a cross-cultural study of mobile-phone use in Sweden, the US, Italy, Japan, and Korea.

Nancy K. Baym is Associate Professor of Communication Studies, University of Kansas. She teaches about communication technology, interpersonal communication, and qualitative research methods. Her books include Tune In, Log On:

Soaps, Fandom and Online Community (Sage, 2000) and, co-edited with Annette Markham, Internet Inquiry: Conversation about Method (Sage, 2009). She was a co-founder of the Association of Internet Researchers, co-organized its first conference, and served as its President.

Sandra Braman has studied the macro-level effects of digital technologies and their policy implications since the early 1980s. Her recent work includes Change of State: Information, Policy, And Power (MIT Press, 2007), and the edited volumes The Emergent Global Information Policy Regime (Palgrave Macmillan, 2004), Biotechnology and Communication: The Meta-Technologies of Information (Lawrence Erlbaum, 2004), among others.

Janne Bromseth is working with cultural analysis, in particular queer perspectives, on new media, education and lgbtq subcultures (i.e. lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and queer subcultures). She has long focused on Scandinavian mailing lists, studying constructions of group norms, gender and sexuality, and the intersection of online/offline in creating local (sub)cultural mediated community. At present she works as a researcher at the Centre for Gender Research, Uppsala University, Sweden.

Niels Brügger is Associate Professor at the Centre for Internet Research (CIR), University of Aarhus, Denmark. His primary research interest is website history, including his current work on the Danish Broadcasting Corporation's website, The History of dr.dk, 1996–2006, and the volume Web History (Peter Lang, 2009). He has published a number of articles, monographs, and edited books, including Archiving Websites: General Considerations and Strategies (CIR, 2005).

Elizabeth A. Buchanan is Associate Professor and Director of the Center for Information Policy Research, School of Information Studies, University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. She specializes in the areas of information and research ethics, information policy, and intellectual freedom, including a current project funded by the National Science Foundation (US). Most recently, she co-authored with Kathrine Henderson Case Studies in Library and Information Science Ethics (2008, McFarland Press).

Heidi Campbell is Assistant Professor of Communication at Texas A&M University. She teaches Media Studies. For over a decade she has studied the impact of the Internet on religious communities and culture as well as the sociology of technology. Her work has appeared in a variety of publications including New Media & Society, The Information Society, and the Journal of Computer-Mediated Communication. She is the author of Exploring Religious Community Online (Peter Lang, 2005).

Laurel Dyson is a senior lecturer in Information Technology at the University of Technology, Sydney, Australia. She has published many articles on the adoption of information and communication technologies by Indigenous people. She has also published the book Information Technology and Indigenous People

(Information Science Publishing, 2007), and a report for UNESCO evaluating their Indigenous ICT4ID Project. The focus of her current research is on the use of mobile technology by Indigenous Australians.

Lorna Heaton is Associate Professor at the Department of Communications, University of Montreal. She is author of The Computerization of Work (Sage, 2001) and a number of articles in journals such as Management Communication Quarterly and the Journal of the American Society for Information Science and Technology. Her research focuses on organizational and inter-organizational issues in the implementation and use of information and communication technologies.

Klaus Bruhn Jensen is Professor at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark. Publications include A Handbook of Media and Communication Research (Routledge, 2002) and contributions to the International Encyclopedia of Communication (12 vols., Blackwell, 2008), for which he served as Area Editor of Communication Theory and Philosophy. His current research interests are Internet studies, mobile media, and communication theory.

Steve Jones is UIC Distinguished Professor, Professor of Communication, and Research Associate in the Electronic Visualization Laboratory at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He is author and editor of numerous books, including Society Online, CyberSociety, Virtual Culture, Doing Internet Research, CyberSociety 2.0, the Encyclopedia of New Media, and Afterlife as Afterimage. He founded the Association of Internet Researchers and is co-editor of New Media & Society.

Lori Kendall is Associate Professor in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, and researches in the areas of online community and culture. Her publications include "Beyond Media Producers and Consumers" (on online videos, in Information, Communication and Society) and her most recent of several chapters on online research in Internet Inquiry (Annette Markham and Nancy Baym, eds.).

Sonia Livingstone is Professor in the Department of Media and Communications, London School of Economics and Political Science. Her research interests center on media audiences, children and the Internet, domestic contexts of media use and media literacy. Books include The Handbook of New Media (Leah Lievrouw, co-editor, Sage, 2006), The International Handbook of Children, Media and Culture (Kirsten Drotner, co-editor, Sage, 2008), and Children and the Internet (Polity, 2009).

Marika Lüders is Research scientist at SINTEF ICT (the Foundation for Industrial and Technical Research), Oslo. She studies emerging uses of personal and social media, particularly with a focus on young people. She is a co-editor of the Norwegian anthology, Personlige medier: Livet mellom skjermene [Personal Media: Life between Screens] (Gyldendal Akademiske, 2007), and her work has been published in Norwegian and international anthologies and journals.

P. David Marshall is Professor and Chair of New Media, Communication, and Cultural Studies at Deakin University, and head of the School of Communication and Creative Media. His publications include New Media Cultures (Edward Arnold/Oxford, 2004), The Celebrity Culture Reader (Routledge, 2006), and many articles on the media, new media, and popular culture. He has two principal research areas: the study of the public personality and the study of new media forms.

Susanna Paasonen is Research Fellow at the Helsinki Collegium for Advanced Studies, University of Helsinki, with interests in Internet research, feminist theory, affect, and pornography. She is the author of Figures of Fantasy (Peter Lang, 2005), and co-editor of Women and Everyday Uses of the Internet (Peter Lang, 2002), Pornification: Sex and Sexuality in Media Culture (Macmillan, 2007), as well as the forthcoming Working with Affect in Feminist Readings: Disturbing Differences (Routledge).

Jennifer Stromer-Galley is Assistant Professor in the Department of Communication, University at Albany, State University of New York. Her research interests include: the uses of communication technology and its implications for democratic practice; mediated political campaign communication; and, deliberative democracy. Her research has appeared in the Journal of Communication, Javnost/The Public, the Journal of Computer-Mediated Communication, and the Journal of Public Deliberation.

Jenny Sundén is Assistant Professor in the Department of Media Technology, Royal Institute of Technology (KTH), Stockholm, with interests in new media studies, queer/feminist theory, and games. She is the author of Material Virtualities: Approaching Online Textual Embodiment (Peter Lang, 2003), and co-editor of Cyberfeminism in Northern Lights: Gender and Digital Media in a Nordic Context (Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2007) and Second Nature: Origins and Originality in Art, Science and New Media (forthcoming).

T. L. Taylor is Associate Professor at the Center for Computer Games Research, IT University of Copenhagen. She has published on values in design, avatars and online embodiment, play and experience in online worlds, gender and gaming, and pervasive gaming, including her book, Play Between Worlds: Exploring Online Game Culture (MIT Press, 2006), which uses her multi-year ethnography of EverQuest. She is currently at work on a book about professional computer gaming.

Barry Wellman directs NetLab, Department of Sociology, at the University of Toronto, a team studying the intersection of online and offline networks – social, communication, and computer – in communities and at work. He is currently writing Networked with Lee Rainie. Wellman has (co-)written more than 200 papers with more than 80 co-authors, including The Internet in Everyday Life (2002). Wellman is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada.

Deborah L. Wheeler is Assistant Professor in Political Science at the United States Naval Academy. Her areas of research include information technology diffusion and impact in the Arab world; Gender and international development; and the Palestinian–Israeli conflict. Her extensive publications include The Internet in the Middle East: Global Expectations and Local Imaginations in Kuwait (State University of New York Press, 2006).

Alexis Wichowski is a doctoral candidate in Information Science at the University at Albany, State University of New York. Her research interests include computer-mediated communication, incidental information encountering, Internet studies, and the evolution of information environments.

Acknowledgments

We begin with our contributors: you have each researched and authored what we take to be watershed chapters – and you have further worked with us patiently and cooperatively throughout the course of developing this volume. We cannot thank you enough.

We are further very grateful indeed for the Association of Internet Researchers (AoIR) that in innumerable ways has served as the inspiration, incubator, and scholarly "sandbox" of this volume – i.e., the place where we can freely explore and play with both new and old ideas in a supportive but still appropriately critical milieu. In particular, we hope that the mix here between younger and more senior scholars and researchers faithfully reflects one of AoIR's distinctive characteristics – namely, recognizing that some of the best work in Internet studies comes precisely from the fresh eyes and minds of those at the beginnings of their scholarly careers, especially as this work is fostered and enhanced through mutual dialogue with their more experienced peers.

We wish also to thank Elizabeth Swayze at Wiley-Blackwell, who first invited us to develop this Handbook. It has always been a pleasure to work with Elizabeth, Margot Morse, Jayne Fargnoli, and their other colleagues at Wiley-Blackwell, who could be counted on for unfailing support, advice, and encouragement.

Mia would like to thank Ohio University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for providing wonderful environments to engage in this work. Likewise she would like to thank students in her classes on new media, who have sharpened her thinking on many of these topics, as they have challenged her to consider (and then explore) multiple aspects of life online that she had not yet studied.

Charles thanks Drury University for leaves of absence and a sabbatical year; and the Institute for Information and Media Studies (IMV), Aarhus University, for correlative guest professorships. The IMV secretaries, librarians, colleagues, and head of department Steffen Ejnar Brandorff, were consistently generous with their resources, insight, and perhaps most importantly, warm hospitality, all of which created an ideal environment in which much of this Handbook took shape.

Last, but certainly not least, we are deeply grateful to our families and friends. You know all too well how we were compelled on more than one occasion to ask for your forgiveness and patience as we struggled to sort out yet one more snarl or meet still one more deadline. As only friends and family would do, you have lovingly supported this work in manifold ways. As one says – but only rarely – in Danish, tusind tak! (a thousand thanks!), and in New England, that the publication of this volume represents a "Finestkind" of day.