One of the animals that live in the mountains of Nepal and China is the red panda. These pandas typically grow to the size of a house cat but with a longer and heavier body. The red panda has reddish-brown fur, a long, furry tail, and its front legs are shorter than the back ones. Red pandas have large round heads. They use their big tails as wraparound blankets to get warm in the cold mountains. The tail helps them to climb trees easily.

Red pandas have excellent eyesight, hearing, and sense of smell. These senses help them search for food during night because during the day they usually rest. Red pandas eat too much of bamboo leaves about four pounds daily but sometimes, they eat eggs, insects and birds. Red pandas are not giant pandas. They are not bears. They're in their own family, they are raccoons. Other names for the red panda are lesser panda, Himalayan raccoon, and fire fox. According to scientists, red pandas are rare and unique animals.
