B: Reading Comprehension (16 Marks)

Read the following text carefully then answer the question below:

The Bactrian camel is most famous for the two large humps on its back. It is a huge camel that can grow to over two metres tall. It has a brown fur coat that gets long and thick in the winter to help it keep warm in the cold desert. The coat falls off in the summer.

Bactrian camels eat plants. Their stomachs are strong .They can eat almost any type of dry and sharp plants that other animals may not eat. They can also eat clothes and even shoes when they are very hungry. They live in the deserts of north Asia. They tend to live in groups of 6 to 20 camels.

Camels store fat in their humps. They convert fat into water and energy when they don't have food or water to drink for some time. A thirsty camel can drink a lot of water. It can drink over 30 gallons of water in just a few minutes! 160
